

Registering Concern

The challenge to piece together his spaceship fuel reminded Tim of a similarly chaotic experience from a past semester at MIT. He had been running late to an advising meeting and hadn't thought about possible HASS classes to take. On the way to his advisor's office, he had glanced at several posters advertising exciting classes, but he only recalled snippets when he got to the meeting and couldn't recall which ones fit his schedule. Fortunately, his advisor was helpful and they chatted about intersectionality and how Tim could use his power to create change.

